to be a clearly defined one in the election if the Democrats are successful in their present plans.

"In the primary contest Elliott invaded the stronghold of the wets in San Francisco, openly declared himself a bone dry candidate and appealed for the support of his Democratic followers on that basis. Many of his Democratic friends thought this would absolutely kill his chances, in San Francisco particularly, but Tuesday's election showed that he lost San Francisco by less than 400 votes. This surprising result has convinced his friends that he has more than an even chance to defeat Senator Shortridge."

The audit recommended that the bond of the city treasurer be increased from $15,000 to $50,000.

Would Remedy Practice

In an appended comment the auditors pointed out that county officials do not report to local authorities on collections of special assessments, but that all sums from the county come in a lump with details following so much later that it is next to impossible to keep the accounts of the various special funds. They urged the board to consult with the county officials in order to correct this. As the county now reports its collections Torrance authorities do not know until months later to what funds collections should be credited.

Transfers from the general fund to special funds have therefore been necessary from time to time until detailed collection reports have been received from the county.

Commend Local Men

The auditors stated that they wished to "commend the accounting department for the able and efficient manner in which the books and records have been kept." The comment added: "The accuracy and completeness of the records have saved us many days of work and thereby greatly reduced the cost of the audit to the city."

The solvency of Torrance was revealed by the statement of assets and liabilities. The assets aggregated $632,496.70, with liabilities at $295,645.56. The excess of assets over liabilities was $336,851.14.

The audit was made by Stephen A. Gavin and Breeze Boggs of the Stephen A. Gavin Company.

Mrs. Helen E. Webb accompanied her husband on an eight-day business trip north. Mr. and Mrs. Webb were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Coy at San Mateo, and of Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Carmons at San Francisco. A night was spent in the redwoods at Questa la Honda. A wonderful trip, and the weather ideal.
